The proposed amendment would repeal the "small cap" limit, under which only stocks with a market value of up to $80 million can be considered "small." It is still unclear what will happen if the measure is approved in its current form. Federal regulators have issued guidance to the exchanges suggesting they might prohibit stocks they permit to be deemed "small." Senate President Kevin Meyer said he was "very disappointed" the amendment failed, but he did not rule out moving it again in the future.
